FREW & CAMPBELL,

TUESDAY HORNING, APRIL 13, 1880 A New Industry, and How It Was Spoiled in the Zenith of Its Success.

One of our exchanges tells its readers a raise and lived in clover for a short time, and how he might have continued to bask in the warm sunshine of prosperity if he lived in a western town, not many miles from Chicago, found himself much reduced an absolutely "free church" open for all

He began operations by equipping himself with a small hand-bag, and by putting on his ulster unaccompanied by trousers. Thus arrayed, he entered a Chicago hotel, and mentioning that he had just arrived in the city, and intended to start for St. Louis early in the morning, he took a room, and went to bed. The next morn-ing the hotel was aroused by the violent Louis early in the morning, he took a room, and went to bed. The next morning the hotel was aroused by the violent ringing of the new guest's bell. The servant who answered the bell found him in a state of great excitement, in consequence of a robbery which he said had been perpetrated upon him. He demanded to see the landlord, to whom he complained that his room had been feloniously entered during the night, and that his only pair of trousers, which cost $18, and in one pocket of which was his purse, containing $15 and a through ticket to St. Louis, had been stolen. The landlord was greatly grieved, and a thorough inspection of the room conclusively showed that the guest was wholly devoid of trousers. The conclusion that he had really been robbed was inevitable, and the landlord foresaw that his house would be denounced as a den of thieves. would be denounced as a den of thieves. He, therefore, like a wise man, begged the bereaved stranger not to be annoyed, and assured him that his losses would be made good. A supply of tronsers from a ready-made clothing establishment was brought in, and the man selected a satisfactory pair. The landlord then gave him $15 and a ticket to St. Louis, and, as a further peace-offering. handed him a receipted bill for supper, lodging and breakfast. Thus the reputation of the hotel was saved, and the wearer of the ulster receipted the supplemental to the same of the churches; and timay be that neither the pastor nor the church his ledicates. saved, and the wearer of the dister re-turned to his lodgings, having made $15 like the Plymouth church in Brooklyn in cash, a ticket worth several dollars deliberately remove all show or seen more, and a new pair of trousers.

n't brought no trousers into that there room." Furthermore, he seized the unfortunate man's ulster, and, instead of supplying him with trousers, coated his centennial. Each discovers something addefenceless legs with tar and cotton-batting, and in that deplorable plight cast him out. Still, in spight of this failure, the owner of the ulster deserves the credit of inventing a new industry, and had it of inventing a new industry, and had he had the wisdom to abandon Chicago in time and to select as his pray tha is title at this day. It was largely a pro time and to select as his prev th

RELIGIOUS DRIFT.

A Lone projected "pilgrimage" of Engish Roman Catholics to Lourdes, headed and led by Cardinal Manning, will leave on May 31st.

Tus Michigan Supreme Court has deided unanimously that the laws which declare all Sunday contracts void except those for works of charity and necessity, do not apply to a subscription made on Sunday in aid of the purchase of a church. It holds that the support of public worship is a work of charity, and that promi how an impecunious fellow out West made see made in support of it can be enforced in courts of law FRANCIS A. PALMER, President of the Broadway bank, New York, and a member had only been discreet enough to have let of the Broadway Tabernacle Church, has well enough alone. It seems from the bought for $75,000 the Methodist Church story that an enterprising individual who in Thirty-fourth street, for the purpose of from Chicago, found himself much reduced in the matter of wearing apparel. About all the wardrobe that was left for Sunday wear was one white shirt, an ulster overcost, a rather decent hat and a pair of boots. With these he resolved to go to Chicago and experiment as a man of shape and talents.

He began operations by equipping himself and the state of t

THE Interior says that a new book needed on the evidences of Christianity, a book to do for this age what Paley did for his age and Butler for his. Here are two bits of advice which the Interior offers to the man who may undertake such a work:

Dr. LEONARD BACON writing in approval to the Congregationalists of its position concerning the Lord's supper as a church rite, adds his own protest to the modern tendency toward the cheapening of the holy sacrament. "The fact," he says, -and it must be frankly acknowledged of any barrier between the church and the world in the communion of the Lord's in cash, a ticket worth several dollars more, and a new pair of trousers.

There are many hotels of different degrees of excellence in Chicago, and to twenty-two of these the wearer of the ulster paid a trouserless visit. Twenty-two times did the astute man complain to the landlord that he had been robbed. The result was the collection of twenty-two pairs of desirable trousers, of sums of money varying from five to fifteen dollars, and amounting in the aggregate to over two hundred dollars, and a series of tickets to all sorts of places. Each landlord was so annoyed on finding that a robbery had taken place in his house that he kept the matter carefully secret, and, in some cases, bribed his servants to do the same. Thus, the ingenious Chicago man, in the space of little more than a month, lived sumptnously at a variety of hotels free of cost, and accumulated clothing and spending money with the greatest ease.

It was prosperity that finally ruined him. He fell into the habit of drink too much champagne, and when under the influence thereof finally made the terrible mistake of being robbed a second time in the Plumber House. The landlord immediately recognized him, informed his guest that he was an imposter, and "had n't brought no trousers into that theer room." Furthermore, he seized the universe in the common. The common to the channing dor the Channing with the treatment of the decidence of the disciplination. The holy supper is not a solitary meal but a communion—not simply the communing of the individual soul with Christ, which might be in solitude and silence, but the coming together of the disciplination of the landlord immediately recognized him, informed his guest that he was an imposter, and "had n't brought no trousers into that there room." Furthermore, he seized the universe of the channing of a kindly word, spropos of the Channing of a kindly word, spropos of the Channing of any inverse and the name of the Lord."

Tue orthodox religious papers all have mirable in the man, and indeed is in clined to reck on him nearer in belief to its own sect than the one which looks up to him as its own especial saint. Thus Zion's Herald remarks that "the Unitariin time, and to select as his prey the landlords of other tows, he might now be rich and prosperous.

For fear that some second-hand man out West may think this novel performance a good trick-to travel on, and may conclude to take in Wheeling and other unsophisticated towns hereabouts, as a part of his territory, we have thought it best to put all the hotel keepers within the bounds of our circulation on their guard. Let them spot all men in ulsters who come in sate at night, and request to be called early the next morning. Be sure and see that they have trousers on.

This makes the seventeenth renewal of my subscription to your paper. I commenced reading it three months before the birth of West Virginia. Sometimes I have differed with you in opinion, but on the whole we agree as near as it is possible for human minds.

Let us have a straight Republican State ticket, a sound, pure and undefield Republican platform, with a gold and silver plank in it, and no third term.

get his full allowance; but as there are no stipulations, nothing in the shape of a contract that can be enforced, he must accept what he can get, be it less or more, and it is generally less—and thank the Lord it is no worse with him. We recall one Methodist minister—and he is a representative of thousands—who was in the active itineracy of the Church for forty-eight consecutive years, and for twenty of them a Presiding Elder, whose receipts averaged less than $240 a year. He was thought to have fared well.

If the preachers were paid fixed salaries, as those of the other churches are, or their services stipulated for at so much a year, they would come to General Conferences, if chosen delegates by the Annual Conferences, prepared to pay their own board bills and select their own quarters. As it is, they must look to the local membership of the city honored by the General Conference to help them out. Like the Apostles, they take neither purse nor scrip with them, and look to Providence with as much confidence as the old prophet in the wilderness, to provide for them. The Methodist Episcopal Church is now so well anchored in the land, and has grown so great in numbers and wealth, that the time seems to have and wealth, that the time seems to have come for a thorough revision of the linerant plan, and, above all, for doing away with the voluntary feature of the system of ministerial maintenance."

Wayne County Delegates to the State Convention—They are Probably for Binine.

Cerebo, Wayne Co., April 9, 1880.

Editor Intelligencer.

At the Republican County Convention, held at the Court House in this county on the 7th inst, the following gentlemen were appointed delegates to the State Republican Convention to be held in Wheeling on the 12th of May next, to select delegates to the National Convention at Chicago, viz: G. F. Ratcliff, Z. D. Ramedille, David Bartram, Y. Napier, Ira G. Copley and Jos. M. Kirk.

No expression of preference as to Presidential candidates was made. My observation is that Mr. Blaine leads any, if not all other candidates in this part of the State, but the nominee of the convention will. I believe, receive the undivided vote of Wayne county.
